Size Definitions*

Coniferous Evergreens: Size is defined as the height, in feet (') from the ground to the top whorl of branches on the tree (e.g. the leader is not included in the height measurement).

Single-Stem Deciduous Trees: Size is defined as the diameter of the trunk (also called "caliper"), in inches ("), measured at a point 12 inches above the base of the tree.

Multiple-Stem or Clump Trees: Size is defined as the approximate average height of the stems in feet (').

Shrubs: Size is defined as the lesser of both the height and spread (width) measurements, in inches ("). E.g. A boxwood 16" tall but 13" wide will fall into the 12"-15" category. Both measurements are taken based approximately on the average extent of the branches of the shrub, excluding leaves.

*These definitions represent simplifications and are intended solely to give the customer an idea of how our trees and shrubs are classified into different size groups. The exact sizing of trees and shrubs will be conducted according to the guidelines laid out by the American Nursery and Landscape Association's 2004 American Standard for Nursery Stock, which can be found at
